The knowledge you gain from reading and using this book will enable you to create different types of images, such as the still and action images in this book. You can use these photographs for teaching purposes and in your books, as well. If you want to go even further, you can use the photographs in this book as samples for your own images. One of the best ways to learn about Photoshop is to use it. If you're prepared to invest the time necessary, you can help yourself a great deal by playing around in the program. The next three sections give you some helpful tips to get you started. But first, here are some basics: A `_raster image_` is a bitmap image that uses dots and lines to reproduce an image. A _bitmap_ is a specific form of raster image. A bitmap has only two colors per pixel: black and white. In other words, it's a two-color image. Photoshop's ability to add transparency effects to a raster image is its most useful feature for creating action or motion graphics. _Macro_ (a program for creating a macro, which is a preprogrammed program that performs a specific task, such as drawing lines or placing specific items in a series) is a term from the early days of Photoshop that refers to a user-defined set of steps. It's similar to a series of shortcuts in video editing software. _Layered files_ refer to files that have been saved in the Photoshop format. When you open a layered file, the image appears in layers, like a stack of photographs. You can then add, move, and manipulate the layers of the image using Photoshop. _Palettes_ are toolbars that enable the user to make quick and easy selections of certain types of colors or areas in the image. Most default palettes are fairly limited, but you can make your own palettes from scratch using the palettes you see and hear about in the next few chapters. _Photoshop Elements_ is a free version of Photoshop that is available on a CD with a typical home computer. It has the same tools as Photoshop with fewer editing functions and a simpler interface. However, its importance in the industry far exceeds its size. _Pixelmator_ is a free program by Apple that lets you manipulate and customize digital images. Pixelmator has many features in common with Photoshop, including many of the actions and selections (which are explained in

Hilarious Video: Man Sings Rapper's Words About Being Black & In Love

“Trap night in the club, I’m the hottest rapper in the door,” raps Bryan “Gotti” Williams, the executive producer of the video. “I like to party with my hot sauce, if you holla at me I’ll make you feel like a melody.” “I don’t think I’ve ever been the hottest rapper at a club before,” Bryan Williams continues in the video, tongue firmly planted in his cheek. Singing “Trap Night in the Club” by R&B superstar Jeremih, Williams is joined by four women, each sporting a different style — red braids, eyeliner, face paint and tattoos. Lyrics to “Trap Night in the Club” include “This song is just a little bit of what I’m into.” And, “I like to party with my hot sauce, if you holla at me I’ll make you feel like a melody.” Jeremih’s hit is a remix of another song, “I’m Yours” — a collaboration with rapper Tyga on a hip-hop-flavored “kissing song.” R&B singer-songwriter Jeremih was already a favorite in the background vocals department of R&B. As singer, songwriter and producer, he’s produced for artists such as Wale, Ciara and Soulja Boy. Jeremih also produces the single “Whip My Hair” by country music superstar Taylor Swift. The duet, “Blank Space,” made it to No. 1 on Billboard’s Hot 100 chart. In case you’re wondering, the original “Trap Night in the Club” video was filmed at the same club, Cloud 9, that appears in the new video, at what Williams calls “another party.” In the video, Williams runs around — bumping and grinding — while wearing a dark hoodie, to demonstrate his “hood cred.” The women in the video follow suit. He points out a man who “looks like he’s never been to a party at Cloud CNN’s ‘full-blown lie’ about Paul Manafort There’s video to see of the interview with Anderson Cooper, on the eve of the trial of Paul Manafort. There are excerpts in print media, even the Times has the same (but not yet the same as the video, which will appear this afternoon or evening in the media). Just take a look at this: CNN’s Anderson Cooper on Tuesday refused to call the FBI’s wiretap warrant on the personal and business cellphones of Paul Manafort’s accuser a “wiretap.” “It’s just a wireless tap on a cellphone. The metadata is what the government said about the information they can get,” Cooper told former Manafort deputy Rick Gates as he sat in a jail cell awaiting trial in the Special Counsel Robert Mueller’s Russia probe. Cynics would say that it isn’t technically a ‘wiretap’ because the tapping wasn’t done on an actual telephone line, and therefore it’s not really on a ‘phone line’. In fact, the FBI literally dug trenches to hide the wire below a road in Washington, with a T-shaped metal tip attached to the phone lines and an additional T on the other end, which they connected to a listening device.

Cooper's statement is a full blown lie — the product of an agenda-driven media propagandizing. It's not technically a lie. It's a half truth in service of lying. It is a lie. But it's not technically a lie. Cooper isn't a trained journalist. Therefore, there's no way the average joe in America who watches CNN and the like would ever notice. But the media loves to do this, and they will. Media always spin and distort things. But that half truth thing? Don't mess with that. Cooper told an outright lie to the effect that it was not technically a wire tap. That's a lie, and he should've known better. It was a half truth, but that half truth was not a lie. He's the liar. .setColor(R.color.colorText)
