The B-52H bomber was struck in the northwestern Iraq region of Al Anbar on Nov. 29. The plane was hit by ground fire and went down near the Islamic State-controlled village of Alb-Bakham, located some 150 miles east of the capital of the Iraqi province of Salahuddin. The crew was able to eject safely. They were not hurt. Local officials told the New York Times the attack was a direct violation of an Iraqi air exclusion zone the U.S. military had imposed near the Syria-Iraq border. Col. John Dorrian, a spokesman for U.S. Central Command, said the military did not know what type of weapons were fired. "The investigation will determine the root cause of the incident," he said. "The coalition respects and mourns the loss of any innocent life." "We take any unsafe action on the battlefield very seriously, and will hold the accountable for their actions, regardless of who they are or where they come from," he added. o f - 1 0 0 9 9 3 7 7 9 4 * u
