Hyperglycemia, DKA, and Hepatic Ischemia/Infarction after Pancreatoduodenectomy: A Study of a High-Volume Center. It is well known that postoperative hyperglycemia is a risk factor for postoperative complications. However, the relationship between postoperative hyperglycemia, development of diabetic ketoacidosis (DKA), and hepatic ischemia/infarction after pancreatoduodenectomy (PD) is not well known. In this study, we investigated the frequency of postoperative hyperglycemia, DKA, and hepatic ischemia/infarction, and determined the predictive factors that are associated with postoperative hyperglycemia, DKA, and hepatic ischemia/infarction. We analyzed data for 144 consecutive patients who underwent PD between 2007 and 2012. Induction therapy was not used before PD. The frequency of postoperative hyperglycemia was 45.8% and that of DKA was 7.7%. Postoperative hyperglycemia, although not DKA, occurred more frequently in patients who had excessive intraoperative bleeding, and postoperative DKA, although not hyperglycemia, occurred more frequently in patients with excessive bleeding. One patient (0.7%) who developed hepatic ischemia/infar
